

BEATEN TO DEATH WITH FENCE RAIL

at the point of a revolver, compelled three of the men to occupy the front seat of the car. Addington occupying the rear seat with the unconscious Lynn. After driving for an hour at the command of Addington, the car was stopped two miles southeast of Hickory where Addington, after ordering the other men from the car, dragged Lynn from the machine and struck him in the face. Lynn sank to the ground by the side of the car and Addington, seizing a six-foot section of fence post which he had torn from a fence along the road, struck Lynn several blows over the head, crushing his skull and lacerating his arms and face.

Coleman then related that after Addington, with the assistance of Whipke, threw the dead body over the wire fence, the four men came to Tulsa.

Addington, told the three companions that none should ever tell of the crime, under penalty of "being put in a little black box."

Robbery Possible Motive.

The state, by introducing testimony of Joseph Willis and his wife of Mounds, the latter a sister of the dead man, attempted to show robbery the motive for the crime, it having been proved by Willis and his wife that Lynn cashed two checks, one for $140 and one for $114, at a local bank on the morning of August 9. It was shown that Lynn had this money in his possession at the time of the assault made upon him in the automobile by Addington and this was claimed by the state to explain Addington's reason for killing Lynn. Addington escaped after the
